Washington Oritic.

While in the quaint old town of St. Augustine, the President and S-cretary Chandler arranged to attend services on Sunday, morning at a colored church. When the deacons of the church became aware that such distinguished people were to be present, the front row of seats was reserved for them, to which they were escorted with due form and ceremony. The minister threw all of his available muscular eloquence and earnestness into the prayer with which he opened the service, and then arose and announced that "dis congregation will jine in singin' de gnd ole hymn," Bring form dat ryal distem." The congregation arose, led by the President's party, and the gray-topped preacher, after nervously adjusting his spectacles, repeated from the hymn book in a clear voice:

form of the land grant system, large tracts situated in these States, designated as swamps and overflowed land, were granted by the National Government to the several States in which they existed on condition that the governments of those States should adopt means for rendering those lands fit for cultivation. Large quantities of these lands have thus been systematically drained, improved, and put under cultivation. But there is still an immense amount of the same description of land remaining under water in Northern Ohio, Southern Illinois, Eastern and Southern Missouri, Minnesota, Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana. In the old States of the Atlantic seaboard there are very extensive swamps through New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, the Carolinas and Georgia, all of which could and should be reclaimed by systematic drainage and put under cultivation. In New Jersey a large amount of swamp land has been used for the cultivation of the cranberry, for which purpose this land is more profitable than much of the sandy soil devoted to truck-farming.

That polonaises are as popular as ever is an evidence of not only good but economical taste. A fine black cashmere polonaise should be considered among the indispensable articles of the wardrobe. It is a great mistake to cut brocades and other heavy figured satins into flounces or plaitings or other trimmings. The simplest styles of the sixteenth century are artistic and elegant in their graceful beauty. The brocaded skirt is bain, opening in front over a brocaded breadth of another color or shade, the waist is cut half high with a fall of lace, long and rounded behind; the sleeves reach to the elbow with ruffles. Puffed and slashed sleeves are not only ar istic but picturesque; or there can be a ulation of 174,000, with the gosper as we hold it.

To show what can be done by an organized effort I cite two instances. The Parkersburg church, 370 members, have contributed through the Ch. & W. M. C. $172.05; next is Center Branch Church, of 101 members, $30 50. I might cite many other churches doing earnest work. Can we, while our brothers and sisters are putting forth such noble efforts to take West Virginia for Christ and the Baptists, be idle? Let the world see that we have a common cause and a common interest.
